

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and restricted-access system for monitoring access to a restricted-access system including the setting up of a second telecommunications connection, via which an identifier for a control device is sent to a transmission provider which, in response to this, sends a decoding key via the second telecommunications connection to the user of the control device, wherein the user then enters the transmitted decoding key into the control device.